HD SUPPLY FIRE PROTECTION CHANGES NAME TO CORE & MAIN FIRE PROTECTION

New company name marks final step in recent acquisition

ST. LOUIS (August 30, 2017) – HD Supply Fire Protection, one of the nation’s largest distributors of fire protection infrastructure products, today announced the company will change its name to Core & Main Fire Protection effective immediately.

The company, previously a division of HD Supply, became a freestanding enterprise following its acquisition by Clayton, Dubilier & Rice on August 1, 2017.

“The name Core & Main Fire Protection allows us to continue our incredible journey as a leading distributor in the water infrastructure and fire protection industries as well as adjacent markets,” said Steve LeClair, CEO. “As an independent company, Core & Main Fire Protection has an exciting opportunity to accelerate our growth.”

As Core & Main Fire Protection plans for growth, the company will continue its legacy of service and innovation with a commitment to provide quality products and services.

“Core & Main Fire Protection is not a new company, we’re a company with a long history of dependable expertise providing local customer service to contractors and communities across the nation,” said LeClair. “We supply the fire protection infrastructure materials needed to support community development and protect people and property. Our new name reflects our continued commitment to provide innovative solutions for new and existing customers in this space.”
